

Liberal Arts College

Public Lecture

The Golden Age in the Early Renaissance: From Politics to Culture

by
Professor Marvin B. Becker

Marvin B. Becker, Professor of History at the University of Michigan, is author of the recent Medieval Italy: Constraints and Creativity (1981). His articles on Italian and Florentine medieval and Renaissance history have appeared in Traditio, Speculum, Medievalia et Humanistica, Archivio Storico Italiano, Past & Present, and The Art Bulletin, among many other journals. Professor Becker, whose Florence in Transition, Vol. I, Decline of the Commune and Vol. II, Studies in the Rise of the Territorial State (1967, 1968) did much to re-orient Florentine studies, has taught at Western Reserve, Rochester, and The Johns Hopkins universities. He has held Guggenheim, American Philosophical Society, and American Council of Learned Societies fellowships, and been a Fellow of the Harvard Renaissance Studies Center (I Tatti, Florence) and the Institute for Advanced Studies (Princeton).

Rossellino, Tomb of Leonardo Bruni (c. 1445)

Date: Thursday, 3 March 1983
Time: 8:30 pm
Place: H-110 Hall Building
1455 de Maisonneuve Blvd. W.
Sir George Williams Campus

For Information: 879-8051

